Moments of Wisdom

Composing Creativity

Although Mr. Lee studied pre-law and criminal justice in college, he still wanted to give his love for the musical arts another chance. His own high school concert band experience helped him discover who he truly was. As a result, he wanted to give back to the musical community. After his first year at Ipswich he is glad he made the choice to teach concert band.

Creative Collaboration

Before coming to Ipswich High seven years ago Mr.Gallant was an industrial engineer. While it was difficult to leave his field, his decision became easier when the machines he built starting replacing people on the job. One such case was in a Boston post office where he had to meet the employees who would be terminated after his machines were installed. That was the deciding factor for him. Mr.Gallant didn't have the stomach to watch people lose jobs to automation. He decided to refocus his energy on training future skilled workers instead of building the machines to replace them.

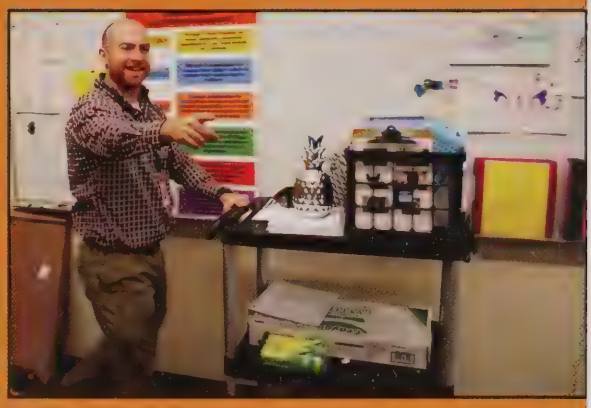

Photographic Perseverance

Even though most of Mr. Sidmore's responsibilities involve teaching regular English classes, it doesn't stop him from dabbling in a variety of other areas. A self-taught techie, Sidmore has always enjoyed playing with Photoshop, photography, and graphic design. When the opportunity to take over the yearbook came up, he saw it as a fitting challenge. Yearbook production was just beginning to transition from paper layouts to digital design, so the timing couldn't have been better. "I never could have sat there with a paper cutter and glue and put the yearbook together. Digital is the way to go," said Sidmore.

Mr.Ames and Gardy (both left) ensure the Junior class doesn't cheat during the annual spirit week leap frog competition.

Mr. Craven (right) struts into the room with his legendary silver pineapple. It is rumored that whichever language teacher comes in the latest has to carry it around for the day.

Mrs. LaFrance (left) makes sure the basil that Honor Sustainability student Adam Fyrer grows is clean and ready to be sold.

"Cleaning up isn't my favorite or probably any teacher's favorite thing to do but it has to be done," said Mr. Chmura (right) while cleaning up after a lab.

"Welcome to the second round of poetry out loud!" Mrs. Slawson announces. Mrs. Slawson took to the stage to kick off the semi-finals of the annual Poetry Out Loud competition, which is in its second year.

Moments in the Sun

KEEPING HYDRATED

The summer of 2016 was full of friendly faces and exciting adventures around the beach town of Ipswich Massachusetts. Knowing that this was the summer before their senior year, the class of 2017 capitalized on all the exhilarating activities Ipswich had to offer. Growing up in Ipswich, summer is most likely your favorite season. The endless beach trips, boating excursions, Crane Concerts and friendly nighttime bonfires creates the perfect environment for adventures.

Although these activities seemed to be the norm, Ipswich was taken by surprise with a record breaking drought that controlled the town. The Ipswich River supplies ten different towns with water every year. When the river dried out completely, the community put a water ban in place.

Businesses like Marini's Farm, where many students are employed, were negatively affected. Adam Fyrer, a high school senior and Marini's worker, says "They had to cut the corn season short because they couldn't meet the demand for water." Ethan Como, also a student and employee said "(We) had to move a lot of irrigation pipes in order to move water from ponds into the fields that needed it. It made my work days a lot longer and harder." Yet despite the hardships the water brought on or rather, lack thereof, the summer of 2016 was one to remember as the seniors look fondly back on their last summer of high school.

1. On the fourth of July, Grace Evans was doing something a little different with her summer. Before her month long Nols camping trip, Grace took a boat to visit the Portage Glacier with her parents in Alaska. She described her trip as"really cool." "The Glaciers are melting because of global warming," she explained, "I was really thankful to see them before they disappear."

2. Riding away from their summer work, Kelsey Daly and Bryanna Simons whirl around on a jet ski at Bryanna's lake house.

3. The Ipswich volleyball girls pose in front of their net during the beach tournament fundraiser. Cameron Henderson explained, "It was raining the whole time. It hurt to hit the ball! But it made it more fun."

4. Charlotte Howe and Julia Glavin continue the annual tradition of jumping off the famous red bell buoy off the shore of Crane Beach (boaters only!)

5. Bronwin Chandler and Chloe Rogers spend a fun day in the sun on Ryan Blomster's boat. Chloe said "We wanted to listen to the music at the castle concert, but didn't want to go to the castle, so we just drove there by boat, and listened to the music in the water". The anchored on the shore of Crane Beach and basked in the music.

6. Sam Corning, Matt Rugo, Jack Reynolds, Kevin Swenson, Zach Potter, Christian Fabri, and Christian LeVasseur are pictured here after jumping off the Gloucester rocks. "It was another boating day for the boys" Kevin said." We were having a blast."

Going the Distance

Jack DeMarco

Living up to a legacy is never an easy thing to do. For freshman cross country and track runner Jack DeMarco, that feat will be no easier. Jack will follow in the footsteps of his sister Emily, a member of the 2016 graduating class, for his entire high school career. Emily graduated last year holding the school record of 5:10 for the girls mile.

As a freshman following in her footsteps, Jack says "My sister's achievements have definitely pushed me and helped me set goals of my own." Those goals include qualifying for states next year and setting a school record.

Jack's emulates the running style and ability of his award winning and CAL All-Star sister. Following graduation, Jack wishes to run for a Division 1 school and says that his "schedule is not too cramped and doesn't hinder my running." Jack's current best time in the mile is 5:02 but he is hoping to break 5:00 in the indoor CAL championships or early on in the outdoor track season.

Fresh Moves

Annie Gillis

Freshman Annie Gillis plays varsity soccer and is off to a strong start in track. Although Annie felt intimidated and nervous at first, she quickly fit in with her team. "My team is like a family," Annie says about her soccer friends.

While the switch from middle to high school sports is difficult for some, the transition has been a smooth one for Annie. "The biggest difference is actually between the sports themselves," Annie explains. She sees soccer as more of a team sport, while track focuses more on individual skills.

Although Annie won her first 1000 meter varsity event, she knows how important it is to keep working hard. Annie says, "In high school you need to be more committed and dedicated to your sport," compared to middle school.

Aaron is in charge of cadets, who are people who are signed up for the program but aren't 18 or older. This program teaches Aaron and his cadets how to fy a plane, but he also practices drills and inspects uniforms. To advance positions, he has to take 2 tests: a leadership test and an outer space test. To advance his training he is involved in a summer bootcamp. It involves 7 days of intesnse physical training, drilling and activities. He plans to remain a member of the patrol for as long as he can.

started off his sophomore football season with more responsibility than ever before. Ben went from playing only during practices freshman year to being a starting quarterback on varsity sophomore year. "It is a great opportunity and privilege to play as an underclassman. I have more chances to improve my play in future years," Ben says. He also explained how he feels more important and a part of the team this year even though he still has to prove himself to the upperclassmen.

Fabulous Fabbri

Christian Fabbri

Christian Fabbri is one of many three sport athletes at IHS, but last year a serious injury had a major impact on his sports career. Over the winter he was using a hedge cutter when it slipped and sliced through his leg straight to the bone. After the surgeries and therapy, Christian's main thought was about sports. As a dedicated athlete (mainly hockey), being taken out for the season made "watching from the bench the worst thing I could do. It drove me nuts." The team ended up with three wins because "we lost two other seniors who were crucial to the team. The season was a long struggle." After hockey Christian went into the lacrosse season knowing he wouldn't be able to play, but still showed up to watch and support the team. "I obviously couldn't play, but I still wanted to be a part of the team." Having played with the same core group for as long as he can remember made sitting torturous.

As football season came around the coach was worried about Christian and had to switch his usual defensive position to offense. "I felt really awkward going into it," Christian said. He started the season as one of the less valuable players being so out of place, but at the end of the season he was a crucial offensive player. "Having been on both offense and defense made it easier for me to make smarter plays. Once I got used to it I really liked the change." By the end of the season Christian was making solid plays with stronger attacks. Finishing the season with seven wins and only four losses made his comeback even sweeter.

Not Just Another Marini

Luca Marini

New to Ipswich this year, Luca Marini stays with a host family so he can play New England hockey. Although he's from Florida, the past two years he has come up to the New England for hockey. Luca says, "Playing hockey up here gives me more exposure to colleges with better teams." Last year Luca went to a school in Rhode Island, which he enjoyed, but he wants to be able to stay at the same school for the last two years. He plans on graduating from Ipswich next year. "It's a lot to be switching schools in high school and I think I'm going to stay here not only because it's hard to switch, but it will let me make more progress with my team here." Moving far away is a commitment and it can be fun, but it's awkward when you live with someone who you don't know. "It's weird to just be thrown in I'm always scared I won't like the host family." He has yet to have a problem with the host families, but it's still weird for the first few weeks, he never can tell if they like him or not. "My hockey season is year round so there's a lot of driving so I drove my car up this year, but last year I always had to ask my host family for rides." Asking for rides was hard because it was everyday at horrible times it made the host family definitely aggravated to some degree, but his passion for hockey had the family continue to enjoy having him. Hockey is something Luca wants to do through high school and hopes to continue at a D1 college.

Stephanie Veerman

For most people going into the principal's office once a day wouldn't be anything to brag about, but one IHS student doesn't mind spending half the day there. Stephanie Veerman is one of the Junior class' more outgoing students, but one thing some people might not know about her is that her dad is the school principal. Having her principal dad always around can be a double edged sword. On the one hand she has him there to talk to. Stephanie thinks "It's nice to have someone who knows almost everything about me to help me on some days." On the other hand she claims having her dad as principal makes her "get in more trouble because he holds her to a higher standard," because of their relationship. Stephanie said, "there was no way I could try to get out of a school punishment at home because my dad knows everything." Although things can go either way when it comes down to discipline, she appreciates having someone looking out for her. "I really only go into his office to use if as a locker because I never remember my combination." Lots of people think Stephanie is a goody goody, but she laughed at the idea. "The amount of trouble I get in at home with my dad is probably double most people." At the end of the day Stephanie enjoys having her dad by her side to make sure things go smoothly.

Underrated

Each season, the Salem News publishes a scouting report on local high school football teams. Like most years, the Salem News had low expectations for the Tigers, predicting the team to only win three games. Little did they know that the Tigers had been busy preparing for what would become their best season in ten years, and would end up finishing 6-5.

This year, the team focused on more than just drills and plays; they were determined to become a family. Senior captain Tommy Ginolfi believed this year was different because "We played for each other. We planned a lot for each gam of the week, and played smart and disciplined." Head coach Kevin Fessette echoed the same mantra prior to the start of every game: "Play for the town and the pride of Ipswich football." Their discipline paid off with an early win over Newburyport, and over the rest of the season they built up a series of other impressive wins. The taste of victory was becoming a welcomed feeling.

Although most remember the playoff game as the biggest win of season, senior captain Christian Neuenfeldt believes that "Every game was as important as the next one," which was why the team remained focused and ultimately, victorious. Although game days were filled with intensity on the field, much of the team's success began long before the official season.

In addition to becoming a closer team, the Tigers rigorously worked out during the offseason. Summer workouts made the team bigger, faster, and of course, stronger. The use of practice and game film also helped the team learn from their mistakes.

The Tigers surpassed all expectations and showed the CAL league their true colors. Senior captain Charlie Gillis says he was "proud of our ability to face challenges and stick together as team." Although the Tigers are losing fourteen seniors, the team is determined to prove themselves as a force to be reckoned with in years to come.

Moments of Balance

Cheerleading

Entitled

With heads down, eyes closed, and arms glued to their sides, the girls stand surrounded by a crowd so silent you could hear a pin drop. All are waiting for the ladies dressed in black to show their talent. Moments before the music begins, they breathe heavily with excitement and terror. The music starts. Arms fly, hands slap, yells echo, and bodies fly in every direction. Each performer moves in sync like an orchestra without a conductor, dancing to the beat. As with any orchestra, a performance like this doesn't just happen. It comes with hard work and dedication.

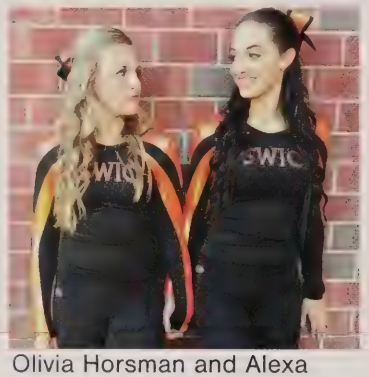

Senior captain Issy Cerundolo knows a thing or two about hard work. From top to bottom, Issy changed positions from flyer to base in just one year. "At first it was very hard to grasp the idea of not flying and I was very sad, but I knew it was best for the team and it was the right decision," said Issy. Although her flying days are behind her, Issy will always remember her time in the air with her fellow four year flyer, Haley Noone. "In the beginning, I thought our season wasn't going to be as successful as we wanted it to be. Losing Issy as a flyer and training a freshman flyer meant we had a lot of work to do. Our team was made up of 11 freshmen and we needed to train them into the strong and hardworking team we are today. I was truly amazed at everything we accomplished and how far we came," said senior Haley Noone.

Hitting another rough patch during the season, freshman flyer Alyssa Montisanti tumbled her way into a foot injury, leaving the team short a flyer for a couple weeks. Despite all of the bumps in the road they hit, they still managed to come out with a great season.

With all new blood and a season full of rigorous competition, the team finished another great season. They are "fully entitled", and don't plan to slow down anytime soon.

Moments of Pacing

Girls Cross Country

Leading The Pack

This was the first year that Ipswich High School sophomore, Nadja Ueckert-LaPlante, ran cross country. Few, including Nadja, anticipated she would take the cross country team by storm. She found her passion for running while participating in spring track, and decided to continue to run distance over the summer. Shortly thereafter, Nadja decided that she would make the switch from gymnastics to cross country. Though she "could barely run two miles" at the start of the summer, spectators soon found her leading the pack as she started performing well at each meet.

Nadja takes training very seriously. Each weekend, she likes to push herself in distance, sometimes running 7 to 10 miles. During the week, Nadja "likes to focus on speed", and runs shorter distances in hopes of improving her times. Although this was only Nadja's first year running cross country, she was recognized as a Salem News All Star. Nadja plans on sticking with cross country for the remainder of her high school career, and has a personal goal of running a marathon before she turns eighteen.

Moments of Traction

Boys Cross Country

From Last to Fast

After trying basketball, soccer, and baseball, senior Reed Dolan finally found his place on the cross country team. Reed first tried cross country in order to do a fall sport, but ended up falling in love with running the moment he started. His favorite thing about the sport is “running with the boys,” despite hating the physical pain of it.

Reed believes running never gets boring when you're running with friends. Not to mention that “every run is different.” As many people know, injuries can be disastrous to any sports season. Calves and shins are what runners injure the most. Even though players want to get immediately back in action, they need time to heal. Upon being asked about his thoughts on the matter, he replied with "You just have to be smart about it, and running while injured is going to do nothing but hurt yourself more in the end."

Even with his body begging him to stop, Junior Adam Calnan stays ahead.

Freshman Pierce DeBoer charges to the finish line.

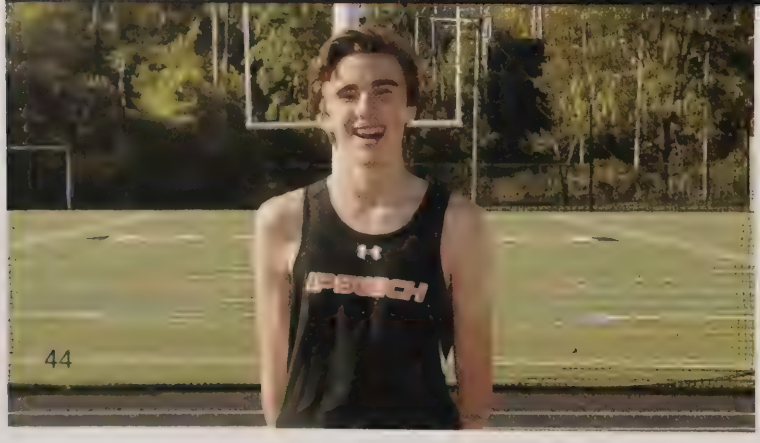

Freshman Trevor MacRae sees the finish line and hustles towards it.

Junior Austin Pszenny refuses to quit until he reaches the end.

Moments of Teamwork

Girls Soccer

Forging Family

Rain only seemed fitting for the occasion. The bright lights of the stadium showcased a team in tears not for their lack of victory, but for the end of an era. Heartbreak; that's the word that came to Malak Rayes' mind when asked what she felt when that final buzzer went off. Utter heartbreak. But emotions as strong as Rayes' can only stem from having a truly fantastic team. "We became a family this year," Rayes stated, "We struggled together, won together, lost together, and most importantly, we pushed each other to work harder." Rayes, one of three captains this year, felt she had big shoes to fill knowing the success of her predecessors.

Focused on rebuilding, Rayes and the other captains had quite an undertaking on their hands. But what truly challenged the captains was the introduction of a new coach this year. "We thought it would be difficult for the team to adjust, but Cortney integrated into our team so easily. It was strange to think she hadn't been there all along."

Although the new coach ended up being a positive addition, Rayes believed the record did not truly "demonstrate how far we came as a team. We improved an incredible amount and put up a fight against every opponent we played." Despite all the highs and lows, the season had to come end at some point. That moment truly captured what a wonderful journey the team experienced. "It's a hard thing to grasp," stated Rayes. "You know it has to come to an end, but the moment it does is unreal. You just flash back to those memories of being a family, and think of all the trials and triumphs experienced together."

Many of the girls had been on the same team for years, so saying goodbye only became harder. Yet as each one walked away from the field they did so with the unforgettable memories forged from seasons of unbreakable camaraderie.

Moments of Determination

Boy's Soccer

Team or Family?

August rolls around, the temperature reaches one hundred, and the Mile Lane fields are filled with boys kicking soccer balls. Each one of them puts in everything they have to impress the varsity soccer coaches. As sweat drips off of them and their muscles burn, they push through it because they know it will all pay off.

This year, the boys soccer team had one of their best seasons in years. From th first day of preseason, varsity coach Greg Scruton pushed them to not only improv on last year's performance, but to work harder than ever towards their ultimate goa the tournament. In addition, varsity captains Max Benford, Josh Dumont, Dukey Kriksceonaitis, and Miles Brengle began to push for a closer team than ever before

Before every practice, the boys would warm up and sit around their coach while he read a chapter or two of the book, The Hardhat, by John Gordon. Though the book was about a lacrosse player named George, they chose this book because it taught the importance of being a team leader and a great teammate. Benford said that, "Everyone looked forward to the part of practice where we got to read it. A question we learned to live by was, 'What would George do?'".

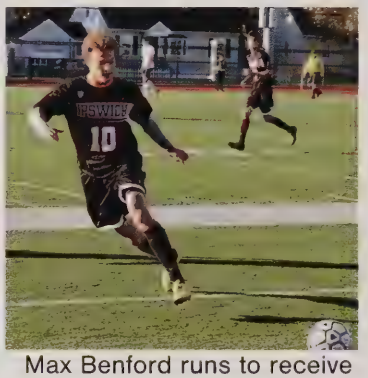

This question carried them through their season, and they ended with their best regular season record in over four years, with nine wins, seven losses, and two ties Unfortunately, the post season closed with a tournament loss against Saint Mary's. Looking towards next season, junior Tyler Whynott says that he is "looking forward to playing with the boys again and seeing how the season turns out. We are more than a team, we are a family."

Moments of Victory

Field Hockey

Finally Finals

Comprised of twelve seniors, one junior, and one sophomore, the field hocke team was determined to make their last year together a great one. Reflecting th motto, they proved they were truly one team, one heart. Finishing a successful season with a 14-2 record, the varsity field hockey team made it to the tournament.

In the first two rounds, they faced Stoneham and Wilmington. Winning both they advanced to semifinals. The team faced Gloucester, and with a 1-0 victory they made it to the finals for the first time in 40 years. "Making it to the finals w such an incredible feeling. I was very excited and so proud of my team and everything we have accomplished," said head coach Sarah Merullo.

The girls faced Watertown in the finals, a team that hasn't lost a game in 8 years. But the girls came ready to play and held Watertown to 0-0 by the end o the first half. "We talked before the game about how we had nothing to lose playing a very intimidating team, but the looks on my player's faces at half-time kind of said it all. Everybody was gaining confidence and realizing they were s in it," said Merullo. As they approached the second half they gave it their all. Watertown eventually scored a goal, but the girls never gave up. A few minutes later, Julia Glavin got a hold of the ball in the circle and scored for Ipswich. Th girls were so excited, and Merullo said, "I don't think I've ever jumped so high my life." Every player fought their hardest until the end, but Watertown came b and won 3-1. The team was so proud of each other for how far they came and how well they played. After putting in all the hard work throughout the season, was finally finals for the Ipswich field hockey team.

For senior Izzy Primack, it isn't over yet. After joining the field hockey progr just last year, Izzy has committed to play for Assumption College. With outstanding stick skills and speed, she often managed to get the ball in the go Izzy was also awarded player of the year for the Cape Ann League, finishing o her Ipswich High School career with thirty three goals and thirty assists.

Golf

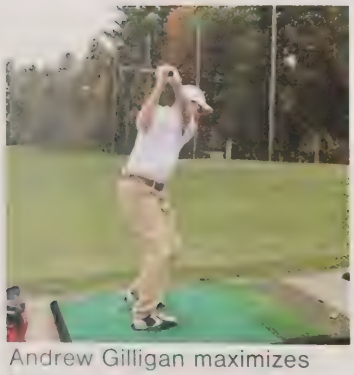

Ladies First

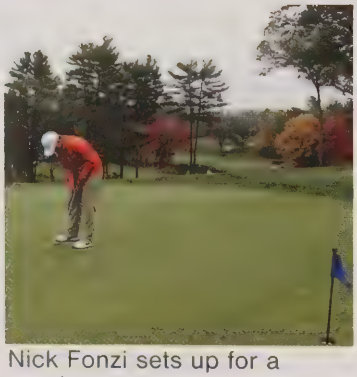

Like most sports, golf is a game of numbers. An average golf drive is usually 200 yards, a typical golf club has about sixty carts, every golf course has eighteen holes, and every golf team has around ten players. The Cape Ann League has five girl golfers; two of those belong to the Tigers. Senior Angela St. Peter and sophomore Mackenzie Greenleaf are proud to be a part of the Ipswich Tiger twelve "man" team roster.

Angela began playing golf at age three with her grandmother at the Beverly Golf and Tennis Club. She continued to play golf in hopes of securing a spot on the high school team, and did just that her freshman year. Angela was the first girl to play for the golf team since 2001, and sai that it was "really intimidating being the only girl with fifteen other guys at tryouts." Angela faced a major setback when she tore her ACL and MCL during a softball practice late in her sophomore year, and found out that she wasn't cleared to play sports until February of her junior year. Angela was heartbroken that she wouldn't be able to play golf in the fall, but has come back with a vengeance her senior year and has held her own in the Cape Ann League.

Mackenzie started golfing when she was around six years old with her father at the Rowley and Ipswich Country Clubs. After continuing to play fo years, she also earned a spot on the team as a freshman. With Angela being out for the season, Greenleaf said that her "freshman season was tough" because she was "the only girl on the team". However, Greenleaf proved herself to be a strong addition and was very happy when St. Peter joined her next season. Although the team fell below par at 7-9-0 this season, the Tigers have high hopes for next season, and are glad that the two "lady Tigers" have become "one with the guys".

VOLLEYBALL

Family Ties

This was a very special year for the Ipswich girls volleyball team. Not only was it special for all the girls who made the first ever competitive varsity volleyball team at Ipswich High School, but also very memorable for varsity coach Kerri O'Connor.

They didn't just have an amazing season, finishing the year with a 10-10 record and making the playoffs, but the team became a close knit family. Both of Coach O'Connor's daughters were on the team this year, making it special season for their family.

Sisters Meghan O'Connor, junior, and Haley O'Connor freshman, brought a whole new meaning of family to the volleyball team. When asked how she felt about it, Megha said that "playing with Haley was a great experience because we pushed each other to play better, while still having fun." When asked about how she felt about her Mom being her coach, she responded that she loved having her as her coach, because she "always encouraged her to do her best".

After a successful season, the girls can't wait to get th family, and team back together on the court.

MOMENTS OF SPIRIT

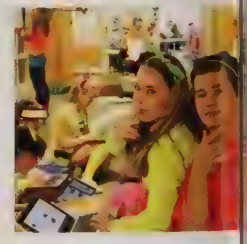

Tension between Classes

As they do every year, on the second day of spirit week the juniors and seniors lined up in the stadium for a tense tug of war battle. This year, with the new turf and low temperatures, the setting was different than in past years. The seniors ultimately prevailed as they were cheered on by their class president, Jack Gardner. "I was looking to give my class some positive encouragement to beat the juniors," he said. One of the other leaders in the contest was Ryan Blomster who seemed well prepared for the event. "Most of the guys played football, so we were prepared. We've also been doing this for four years now, so there wasn't much pressure. "

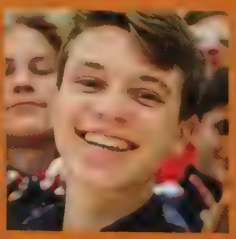

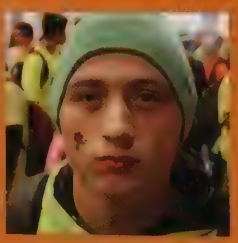

FACES OF

Hot Seat

Musical chairs is arguably the most iconic and popular spirit week event. Taking place in the wooden gym, it tests strength, patience, and balance. Often this event can be intimidating for underclassmen, as the seniors try to assert their dominance. Hannah Herron, one of the finalists in the event, ". . .was surrounded by seniors so it was a lot of pressure." She also added, "It's an event in high demand so I was glad I got to do it for my class." Aside from the seniors winning another year of musical chairs, the freshmen made a show of the indoor games, winning the hockey shoot out and the three point contest. The hockey shoot out was won by Zach List, who said, "The goalie was pretty big but I knew where I had to put the puck in the net." When asked how it felt to beat the seniors he smiled and laughed, then simply said, "It felt good."

SPIRIT

MOMENTS OF SPIRIT

A Moment of Anticipation

All four grades were on their feet at the close of the talent show on the last day of Spirit Week. As the senior's teacher skit faded to black, Mr. C came jogging out with his water bottle in hand. 500 students all gasped as the water bottle left his hand, only to fly off the stage.

Freshmen: 405 points

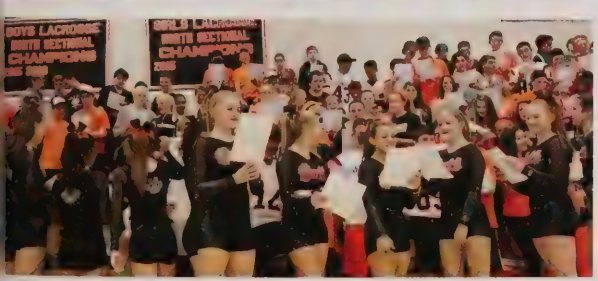

Sophomores: 390 points

Juniors: 612 points

Seniors:1057 points

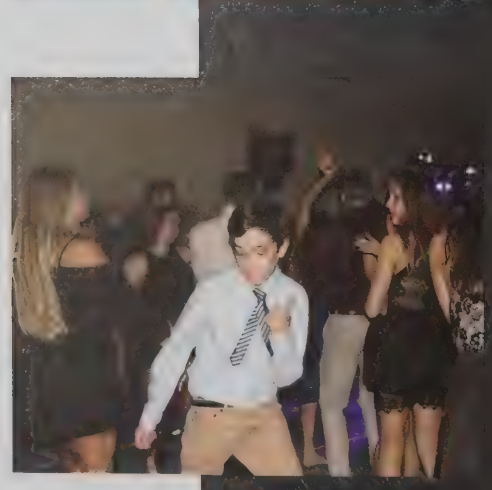

There's No Place Like Home

While there weren't any ruby slippers or yellow brick roads, the homecoming dance was filled with sweaty tigers and one legged dancers. With the date being so late in October, the dance was appropriately themed Halloween. One student in particular sacrificed his comfort for the spirit of Halloween. Senior Jojo Krason came dressed in a full tiger costume. "I was a little sweaty but I felt like I had unlimited power," said Jojo. For senior Kilian Morrissey, wearing a costume was not his biggest concern. Kilian was suffering from a broken foot due to a football injury. He spent the night dancing with crutches and a cast. "It was pretty challenging," he described, "but I figured I might as well shake it a little." Despite his cast, he seemed to master dancing with one leg so well that the entire school formed a dance circle around him. "It was my last time at this dance so I wanted to live it up," said Kilian.

Moments of Style

Twice as Nice

Twins Josh and Sydney Dumont strutted their way down the runway at the Fashion Show. Along with their class advisors, the night was planned by their mom, Mrs. Class Mom Patty Dumont. As this is their senior year, Mrs. Class Mom helped put it together as a last hurrah. "When I found out we were walking together was pretty upset," said Sydney. "But when I was out there on the runway I realized it was a special moment." When asked how their mom felt about the successful night, Sydney said, "It was a ton of work, and I think part of her is glad it's over." Tickets were oversold, and a record number of people showed up t see the show. Thanks to our Class Mom, the hard work will help the seniors a lot during their end of the yea activities.

Sporting the red, white, and blue, Jesse Cullen-Popp and Anna Bartholomew made their way down the runway in matching outfits.

Tommy Ginolfi was quite the ladies man that night, strutting down the runaway with Izzy Primack and Kelsey Daly on each arm, both in beautiful formal dresses.

"It was interesting because I had not done anything like that before. I'm used to performing h music and sports, but I had never done anything with just my voice." But, like anyone, they had a few slip . "The mics messed up on us. That was my biggest beef with the whole thing," explained Reed. "Oh yes I ssed up several times. I pronounced 'chiffon' as 'chiff-in.' There was a segment were I actually had to logize for mispronunciations," said Andrew. Overall, Andrew and Reed were able to make this year's hion show masterfully memorable.

Winter

Moments of Adversity

Defense, Communication, and Energy

This year, the Tigers came in with high hopes. Although they had many heartbreaking losses throughout the season and ended with a 5-15 record, the Tigers consistently proved themselves on the court and gave it their all. "Even though our season didn't go as planned, we battled every game and ended up playing our best basketball at the end of the year," said senior captain Tyler Starr. There were numerous games this year when the Tigers lost by single digits with the end result coming right down to the wire. The team's ability to fight through this and get a few wins toward the end of the season shows their work ethic and the strength of their bond. "Keeping composure throughout the season was hard because we knew that we could win, but things just weren't falling our way," said sophomore Ben Yanakakis. Their composure paid off, and the Tigers won the CAL Sportsmanship award for their dedication and spirit despite their challenging season.

The CAL Sportsmanship award proves that the Tigers consistently played with respect to not only the game, but to other teams as well. Achieving this award despite the results of many long, hard games amplifies the team's character. While they may not have had the best record, they certainly did not lack in hustle, heart, and recognition of their peers. With a strong set of underclassmen ready to take on the challenge of next season, the Tigers remain optimistic and are ready to prove that they have what it takes.

Moments of Motivation

Teamwork

Success for some teams isn't only defined by the number of wins and losses. This year, success for the girls varsity team took the form of overcoming the adversity of a challenging season and building chemistry between the players. "We learned how to cope and overcome the challenges presented to us, and became stronger people because of it," said captain Kelsey Daly.

The girls varsity basketball team started off their season strong with a 46-23 win against Rockport. The players took their time with the ball and used their strategies to their advantage throughout the entire game. Daly said, "We worked our players well; we played as a unit and were unselfish with the ball." Staying positive and working well together during this game displayed their incredible teamwork and undeniable chemistry, and that's exactly what they continued to do.

On senior night, the varsity team gained another victory. Beating Georgetown 52-14 was the icing on the cake for senior players Kelsey Daly, Chloe Rogers, and Sophia Radzim. "We really played well as a team that game," says Daly. Despite the excitement of the win, the players constantly supported one another no matter the outcome of the game. Rogers said, "Unlike past years, there was really no drama on our team which made us a close-knit group." Feeling like a family, nothing could break the girls varsity team apart.

The Tigers ended their season with a loss against Amesbury. Despite the outcome, the girls were not left feeling defeated. Instead, this allowed the team to reflect on an outstanding season. Rogers said, "We weren't a winning team, but the chemistry between the players made the season fun." This team had an undeniable bond between players; motivating each and every girl to do their best and end the season on a high note.

Sacrifices for Swim

Being a swimmer is a balancing act of the physical and the mental. Long, straining practices and chlorine fumes can take a toll on even the most extraordinary athletes. Any member of the IHS swim team can tell you the sport is tough work, but maintaining a personal, academic, and active life on top of it requires an extraordinary individual.

Nicole Senechal, captain and long distance swimmer says, "Managing everything is really hard, but I usually have to sit and really focus after practice. Swimming usually calms me, so on a tough day, it helps to swim hard and feel good. Then I can manage everything better." Senechal's event is usually the 500 meter, an arduous race. Being the determined athlete she is, Senechal copes with the stress accordingly. "While I'm in the water, I sing catchy songs or count my strokes to make sure I'm consistent," she says.

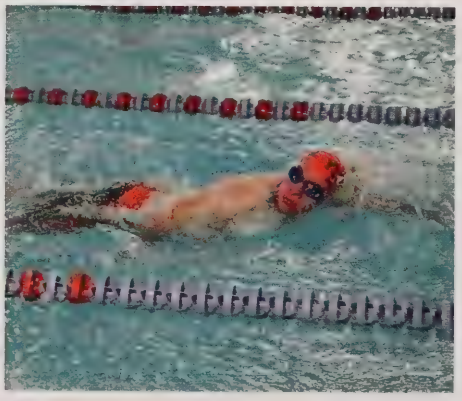

Senior Harry Bertera is regarded as one of the fiercest competitors on the team. "I had a pretty good season, medaling at CALs in the 100 fly and placing 10th at states in the 200 IM," says Bertera. "I had a PR in the 200 IM at states and was happy about where I placed." For most of the team, the long season often ends at CALs. This year, Bertera and sophomore Joanna Mullen were among medal winners. In addition to their achievements at CALs, Bertera moved on to sectionals with freshman Elsa Anderson, senior Ariel Kenny, sophomore Joanna Mullen, junior Carolina Ivanov, and captain Nicole Senechal for relay events.

Contrary to popular belief, swim team is not splashing around in a pool every day. It's not glamorous. It's hard work, which has a dramatic impact on your body beyond just physical tiredness. Senior Ellis Roesler can attest: "During the season, my hair slowly died, and is just now coming back to life," she says after a season of constant chlorine contact. Many other team members relate. But in the end, the people make the whole experience worth it. To Roesler, the most satisfying part is the people. "Swim has been a big part of my life for the past four years. The people truly made the team. I'm going to miss that."

Blocks, Bibs, and Batons

Senior Amanda Recupero is used to being handed the baton. Having consistently proven herself as one of Ipswich's top runners. Recupero anxiously awaited her senior season. After two powerful senior captains graduated at the end of last season, not only was Recupero nervous to receive the baton as the new anchor for the powerful 4x400 relay, but also the responsibilities of captain.

Their first meet opened at the Reggie Lewis Track and Athletic Center in Roxbury, MA. Recupero and the other members of her relay team anxiously awaited the start of their race. The blast sounded, and they were off. Recupero watched as the first two members of her team ran dizzingly around the track, but fear washed over her as she saw her third member trip and fall. "I thought we were going to lose the race," Recupero said. Determined to make her first race a winning one, Recupero grabbed the baton and ran one of her fastest races, catching up and winning at the last second. "I definitely ran faster under pressure," she said.

Recupero joined the track team when her dad encouraged her to begin running in middle school. Over the next few years, Amanda found her place in the 300 meter race during indoor track and the 400 meter race outdoors. During the fall, Amanda participates in a different kind of running. This time, it involves a stick and a small, orange ball. “Field hockey definitely helps me in track because you have to be able to stay on the field and run all the time,” said Recupero. Though she's sad to walk off the field, she knows that each winter brings the excitement of track and the opportunity to once again prove herself as one of Ipswich's strongest female runners.

In the future, Recupero hopes to continue running, and depending on the college she goes to, she hopes to join their track team. She will miss her teammates and being able to practice with them every day after school at track practice. “They are such a good group of people,” Recupero says. No matter where she goes to college, her hard work and determination, as displayed during her track races, will lead her to success.

Two 2-Milers

The two-mile is the race everybody loves to hate. It requires intense patience, concentration, stamina, strength, and training. Above all, it takes dedication, and years of running, and running, and...running.

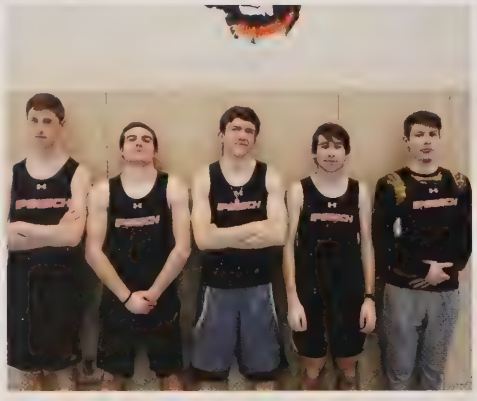

Seniors Reed Dolan and Phil Meneghini are two of the few that claim the two-mile as their own. Having both run consistently for all four years of high school, the two have made a name for themselves as some of the most successful distance runners to go through Ipswich High School.

Though the sport is physically demanding and time-consuming, neither of them seem to mind. "My favorite aspect of track season is the team. We all work together day in and day out, and we socialize to make it a fun, relaxed atmosphere," says Phil. For Phil, most of the friendships he has forged through track reach beyond the finish line. He considers Reed to be one of his closest friends, and says that running together has helped build their "friendly competitive relationship."

Reed Dolan believes that the success of the team can be found through special "meet-day rituals." "Our winning formula starts with a rousing speech by sophomore Stephen Moore. It just gets the boys going. We also make sure we have happy and healthy limbs, and you can always find Dukey Kriksceonaitis stretching out in Kelley's office. Lastly, it all depends on hard work. Kids like Tommy Herron and Mikey D'Agostino don't just come to play, they bust their derrières day in and day out," says Dolan.

Although the boys' team has lost many key runners over the past few years, they have held their own in the CAL league, winning the Small Title two years in a row. Both Reed and Phil plan on leaving their legacies behind at Ipswich, but plan on taking their talents with them to college, where they both plan to run either at the varsity level or just for fun on a club level.

A Record to Remember

Senior captains Izzy Primack and McKinley Karpa couldn't have received a more picture perfect season for their final year of high school hockey. With one game to go, the Beverly-Ipswich co-op girls hockey team approached the end of the season with a winning record of 17-0-3, and were tourney bound. Izzy and McKinley went into the final game against Wellesley with confidence alongside junior Jordan Kimmel. With 17 wins behind them, they were certain they could prevail one last time before the tournament. To their dismay, the girls fought hard but fell short. The buzzer sounded, ending their regular season with a 4-3 loss. With their heads hung low, the team left the rink clouded in disappointment. On the edge of the tourney, the girls knew that this game didn't net the essence of their season. They were consistently dominant, and their record showed it.

Eleven years ago, no one could have predicted the future for two seven year old girls from an Agawam hockey team. A decade later, Izzy and McKinley have been a dynamic duo on the ice for almost half of their lives. Spending so much time together has paid off immensely. "We can pretty much read each other's minds when we're on the ice," Izzy said. The girls' uncanny connection has paid off; Izzy and McKinley are leaving behind big skates to fill, with 72 points each scored this year.

Masco was the first opponent of the tournament for the Beverly team, and a tough one at that. Down 2-0 by the end of the first period, the team needed a comeback. With a goal each by Izzy and Mckinley, the teams were tied by the end of the second period. At the buzzer, the game went into overtime. With no goals scored in overtime, the game would be decided by a shootout. Plagued with pressure, the girls took the ice. McKinley scored the first shot which was quickly evened up by Masco. Blanking in the second round, the shootout yielded a victory for Masco, who managed to sneak in a goal. Major disappointment was the only way to describe the feelings of the team as they left the ice.

Leaving behind an amazing record, McKinley coasts into a post graduate year playing hockey at Taft School, as Izzy heads for Assumption College, where she will play field hockey.

Against All Odds

For junior Christian Fabbri, the 2017 season was going to be tough. laving faced a major injury last spring, Fabbri was nervous for the pcoming season and wasn't sure how his setback would impact him on ıe ice. "It was a little overwhelming to think about. The beginning of the eason was a little shaky, but as things smoothed themselves out it got asier to deal with," says Fabbri.

His dedication and rehabilitation in the weight room paid off, and Fabbri nded up tying for first in points out of Ipswich, and was even able to flop etween first and second line as an enforcer on the ice. Fabbri became nown by other teams as a force of nature for Ipswich/Rockport, and says ıat "you gotta have guys who are willing to grind for the puck if you want) win."

His hard work did not go unnoticed by his team, and he was named a AL All-Star. He was even chosen as one of next year's captains. "Next ear, everyone will be expected to work just as hard as the rest. Some ork harder than others, which shouldn't happen," says Fabbri.

Despite the loss of six powerful seniors, Fabbri is optimistic for next eason and hopes that with the help of his co-captain and classmate, /illiam Zambernardi, success for Ipswich/Rockport is in store once again.

Taking down the Competition

Josiah Krason never dreamed he'd become an All-State wrestler. But four short years and 100 wins later, he proved everybody, including himself, wrong.

His freshman season ended with a 4-21 record. "It was my first year wrestling, and I knew I had a lot of catching up to do," he said. The year after, Krason credited a lot of his improvement to joining Dough Boy Wrestling, a local club in Lowell, Massachusetts. "It was really helpful to be practicing year round," said Krason. He finished his sophomore season with a record of 24-12, and became a standout his junior year with a win at sectionals, a 5th place finish at states, and a 35-10 regular season record. Though Krason fell 0-2 at All-States at the close of his junior season, he says he was "disappointed, but was excited to do better next season."

His senior year was capped with a 37-10 record, along with achieving 100 wins in his career. His season ended with a 2-2 finish at All-States, and while the outcome at All-States was not exactly what he was looking for, it was still an improvement from last year and a good way to end an amazing wrestling career.

Though the Ipswich/Georgetown Co-Op Wrestling team will be losing three Ipswich seniors, Krason is optimistic for years to come and hopes that with a strong group of underclassmen, the team can continue their success.

Moments of Class

Missing the Beat

The night started with slightly different music than what everyone was used to. As loud music poured from the new DJ's speakers, students found themselves scratching their heads. "Yeah, it wasn't really on the mark," said Noel Siegert, "But it seemed like the DJ tried."

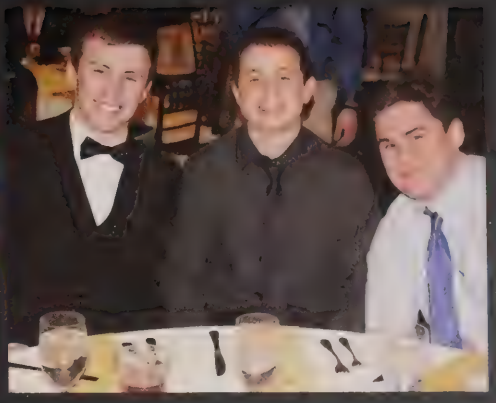

Most figured the music would pick up after the dinner and dancers would hit the floor when more popular songs began. Unfortunately, that never happened. "It wasn' exactly adequate," Reed Dolan said about the music.

While dancing candids were few and far between, the off beat music selection gave a few of the boys another kind of photo opportunity. Noel Sigert, Reed Dolan, and Phil Meneghini were able to lay out in the middle of the empty dance floor for a picture.

Complications with vendors can make or break an event, but the class advisors weren' left with much of a choice. "We went with a different DJ this year due to a booking complication," said Ms. Smith, one of the class advisors. "I guess we learned our lesson the hard way on this one," she said.

Moments of Victory

Tournament Bound

Lacrosse has a rich history of success in Ipswich. The dedicated players have been important factor in why both teams have made deep runs in the tournament year after year, and it looks like it will be no different this time around. Senior Duke Kriksceonaitis says the team owes their success to coaching, and believes “It's very helpful that our coach, Glenn Foster, who started the program at Ipswich, has been around the game for so long. In addition, our assistant coach, Pete Ginolfi, adds a newer style of coaching to the game. The two coaching styles certainly give us the upper hand on our opponents.” Girls' captain Julia Glavin credits most of their success to the chemistry and bond the team shares. “We've been playing together since youth league,” says Glavin. "Everyone is each other's friend as well as their teammate, which makes for a strong bond." A solid set of upperclassmen will return for both teams this spring, and the chance to prove themselves in the post season looks brighter than ever before.

This the Robotics Club's third year at Ipswich. Students in this club frequently build robots according to contest specifications. The club brings these robots to various competitions, and often perform very well. Wiring, drive mechanisms, software development, and troubleshooting are all important skills the club members must learn, but in just a few short years, these students have become experts. With many young, talented members joining the club recently, it is safe to say that the Robotics Club will continue on their path of success in years to come.

Model United Nations is a club in which students spend nearly the whole year preparing for a conference hosted by Eagle MUNC in Boston. During this rigorous 40 hour event students pose as delegates from around the world and focus on a specific heme. Last year delegates would recreate the House Un-American Activities Committee of 1948, a full Central Intelligence gency simulation, as well as a committee tracing the path of the Peloponnesian War. Officers of the 2016 - 2017 school year re, Roman Gadbois as President, Lexie Adams as Vice President, Jake Sadoway as Treasurer, and Carly Restuccia as Secretary.

Moments of Harmony

Prestigious Pairs

Self-reliant Solos

Resiliant Regiment

Senior Ariel Kenny (right) and junior Charley Abuza (far right) focus intensely on their pieces. Both are leaders in the orchestra and show great commitment to their instruments.

Harmonizing

The choir harmonizes with one another to produce a constant, beautiful sound throughout their performance.

Powerful Voices

Fresh Faces

Along with the Concert Band, the Ipswich High School Choir also has as new face in charge. This year, Mrs. Abigail Frost is leading the choir. Formerly of Hamilton-Wenham, Mrs. Frost was excited to join Ipswich's outstanding music program. "Since second grade, I knew I wanted to teach. I had outstanding band and choir teachers in high school and college, and they inspired me to help students love music. There is nothing like choir," says Ms. Frost. Frost has high expectations for the choir; she expects her students to pursue excellence and dig deeper into music. While Mrs. Frost is passionate about music, she brings a balance of intensity and levity to the stage. Students appreciate her efforts to keep rehearsals productive, but fun. Senior choir member Christina Sotis says, "Mrs. Frost makes every rehearsal fun-filled, enjoyable and efficient with her hard work and great personality!"

Moments of Jazz

Seniors Represent

Senior jazz musicians Nicole Senechal, Griffin Wilson, and Lexie Ferris focus on their notes.

Talented Bass

Trumpeter Phil Meneghini (right) and Trombonist, Andrew Fremont-Smith (far right) work together with each section to produce a wonderful performance.

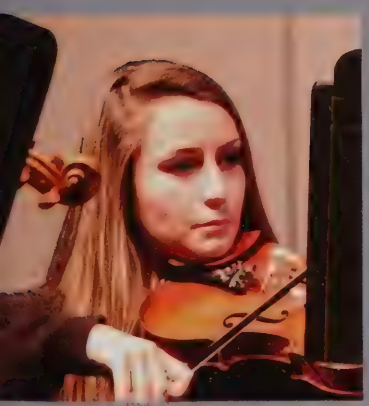

The Ipswich High School Jazz ensemble redeemed themselves this year at the Massachusetts Association of Jazz Education regional competition at Reading High School. Last year, the group wasn't happy with their performance, but this year they proved themselves by taking home gold. Senior trumpeter Christopher Pitcher says "It was a huge comeback from last year when we had a bad night and placed bronze." Seniors Nick DiBello, who plays saxophone, and Andrew Fremont-Smith, who plays trombone, received awards that night in recognition of "outstanding musicianship." Along with DiBello and Fremont-Smith, Christopher Pitcher received the "Most Valuable Player" award for the entire division. The Jazz ensemble walked away that night with relief, excitement, and a spot at the state competition.

At the state competition in Norwood, MA, they faced many tough competitors and received a bronze medal. The group was proud of their efforts and were extremely happy to have made it to states. In years to come, the group is looking forward to making music, improving their skills, and winning medals to prove it.

Moments of Success

Chamber Orchestra

Imagine sitting center stage at one of the most prestigious music venues in New York City, playing to over five hundred people, and performing with some of your closest friends. The Ipswich High School Honors Chamber Orchestra has experienced this feeling before, having played at venues such as Symphony Hall and Boston Conservatory in Boston, MA.

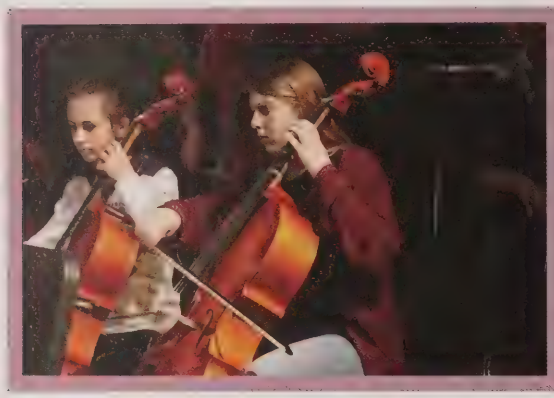

After receiving two consecutive gold medals at the MICCA festivals, they earned an invitation to play at the National Band and Orchestra Festival at Carnegie Hall in New York City in April. The group is the only high school in New England to win the honor. Senior violinist Ellis Roesler says, "We are extremely excited about this opportunity. It's not everyday you can say that you played at Carnegie Hall with your best friends".

The group has been working non-stop all year in preparation and has been hard at work fundraising for their trip. Senior violinist Zoe Duffield says, "Raising money has really shown us how much people in Ipswich appreciate music. You don't know how you're going to impact somebody with your instrument until you pick it up and start playing".

Although Chamber Orchestra is a class, the group of 26 musicians don't think of it that way. "We're too busy having fun to remember that we're being graded. We've become a very close knit group, and we constantly push each other to be the best musicians we can be," says Ellis Roesler.

Though the Chamber Orchestra will be losing 12 seniors, director Mr. Coelho remains hopeful that in years to come, the group will travel down the same path to success.

Moments of Symphony

Talented Cellists

Freshman cellists Al Moulton and Heather Milano, along with junior Noura Rayes and sophomore Tessa Devoe focus on their notes.

Musical Pairs

Stand parnters Ariel Kenny and Katie Lynch, along with partners Martha Rand and Jocelyn Long, hold their bows high throughout the piece of music.

Underclassmen

Cellists Michael Naeger and Elsa Anderson take on the upcoming notes with confidence. Sophomore cellist Alyssa Terry leans in to read her notes.

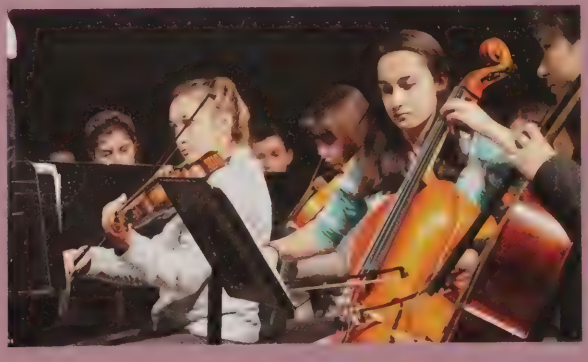

Prepared for Pops

Once a week, several band members come together with the orchestra to make up the Symphony Orchestra. This is the only time students from band and orchestra come together and share their passion for music. "I always look forward to Symphony because I love hearing how the band and orchestra complement each other. We play a wide variety of music, and the concerts are always a ton of fun," says senior violist Sydney Dumont. Each spring, the students are busy preparing music for their annual "Pops" concert. Every year, the concert takes on a new theme. This year, with a dancing theme, students have been busy preparing. The more diverse instrumentation in Symphony Orchestra shows new colors that add a lot to the music, and make it much more fun to play.

Lee-ving an Impression

For the past two years the Ipswich High School Concert Band has had a new face on the conductor's podium. For some schools this would pose a problem, but Ipswich has been lucky. The IHS music department has been fortunate to have nothing but the best conductors. This year, the concert band is fortunate to have Sean Lee in charge. Although Mr. Lee is new to Ipswich, he has already had a dramatic impact on his students. Senior trumpet player Chris Pitcher, who works closely with Mr. Lee says, "It's always hard getting used to a new director but he's doing very well." Mr. Lee is very dedicated to his job; he manages to make his students work while having fun at rehearsals. "He always tries to push us past just playing notes on the page and more towards making music out of our ensembles," says Pitcher. The large ensemble has enjoyed working with Mr. Lee who has managed to incorporate well known pieces of music into his rehearsals. The most popular piece this year for the band is "Beauty and the Beast." For students who grew up watching the movie, being able to learn and play this piece is exciting. It brings back a sense nostalgia from their childhood in these last few months of the school year.

Moments of Drama

Some high school students say they feel more at home on the stage than they do on the field. The hustle and bustle of backstage and the bright stage lights are comforting to them, and even through pre-show jitters and post show celebrations, they love every moment of it. "All I want to do is be on stage," says senior Chris Pitcher. Whether on stage or behind the scenes, these students love being involved. The months leading up to opening night can be busy and stressful, but the moment the lights go down and the stage lights come on, it is all worth it for these students.

Moments of Impact

After the curtain closes this year, there will be a few students who will not be returning to PAC stage. Seniors Chris Pitcher, Andrew Monroe, Jessica Laddin, Emma Perakis, and Christina Sotis are very passionate about theater and the impact it has on their audience. "It's really rewarding, telling a story and seeing how it can impact someone," says Emma Perakis.

Recalling some of the moments that really touched them, Andrew Monroe says he will "never forget" after Godspell, when a man came up to him, shook his hand, and thanked him. Moments like these are the reason they participate in theater. "This is why we do what we do, this is why we do theater," Perakis states. They are sad to say goodbye to the students they have grown up acting with, but are excited to retake the stage in college.

Moments of Inspiration

2017 National Scholastic Art Award, Gold Key

Diving into Digital

The idea of underwater living has intrigued mankind for centuries. Many works of literature, movies, and even video games have depicted bustling underwater cities brimming with advanced technology and peaceful aquatic vistas. The idea of such a city was the inspiration for IHS Junior Todd Oliver's National Scholastic Art gold key winning piece, "Submerged."

Oliver didn't know what to expect when he showed up for Digital Photography 2. But shortly after beginning his "masking project," he realized he could create an image manipulating some existing graphics and layer them with his own photography. "I tried to model the picture after an image I had in my head from a video game I used to play. Some levels take place in an underwater city," said Oliver. Masking is a technique that allows artists to hide or reveal layers of a picture and overlay filters using dramatic lighting effects.

"I'm really flattered," said Oliver about his award winning piece. "We submitted it at the last minute." Oliver believes his last minute winner is the result of hours of creative freedom he had during Digital 2 to explore the tools in Photoshop. "Having the freedom to explore, play with software, and take interesting pictures was really fun," said Oliver.

While he's not completely certain about what he wants to study in college, Oliver, an avid video gamer and computer guy, wants to major in some aspect of computer science.

Moments of...

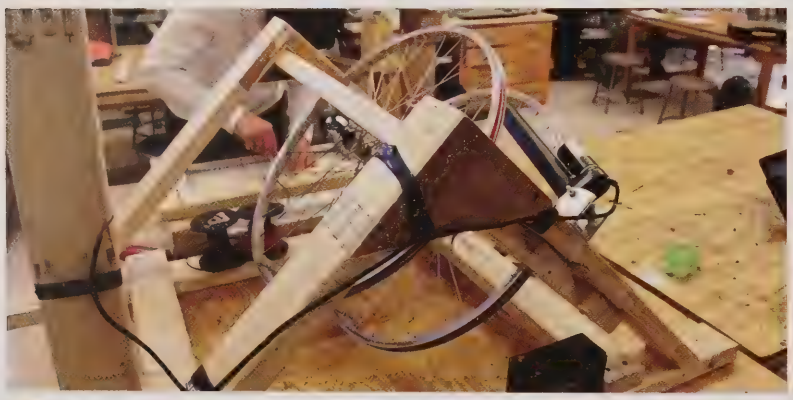

Flying High

Throughout the year, Mr. Gallant's room is filled with students who are busy wiring, shaping, designing, and building. When sophomores Stuart Geller and Aaron Ross look back on their accomplishments in Engineering, one project in particular comes to mind.

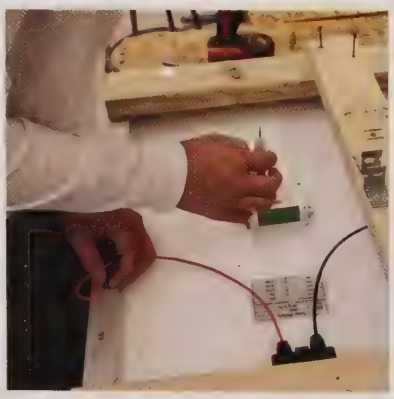

Earlier in the year, Mr. Gallant challenged his students to draft and design a plane that could successfully fly through the air, and Aaron and Stuart jumped at the opportunity. "First, we had to shape the wood. Shaping the plane was the hardest part of the project, because you have to pay really close attention to detail," says Aaron.

Next, students had to wire the motor to the end of a rod, which would power the plane. For Stuart, who wants to be an engineer when he's older, he really enjoyed this part of the process. "I really like the electrical component. We didn't really face any challenges during the project, and I wouldn't change anything if I were to do it again," he said.

The excitement they felt when they saw their plane fly around was evident, and they were proud of all they'd accomplished. Both plan on taking many more courses with Mr. Gallant in years to come, and hope that in their time at Ipswich, they continue building bigger and better things.

Dynamic Duo

The task seemed simple. Design a car, give it power, and watch it drive. Add some competition, and then it becomes fun. For many students, Engineering is their favorite class of the day because they get to see their projects come to life. In Mr. Gallant's second period class especially, students are able to see this firsthand.

The idea of designing an RC car and giving it power is much harder than it seems. Students must consider how to run their car on renewable energy, how to wire it successfully, and how to design it so that it moves as quickly as possible.

Seniors Tommy Cressey and Nick Canzano were asked to create a renewable energy source for the RC cars. Through a series of drafts and designs, they created a renewable battery charger through a wind turbine to use in class.

Nick Canzano was a key player in gathering the materials needed to complete the project. "For me, the hardest part was waiting for the parts to come in that we had to order," says Canzano. The anticipation of the build was growing, and they were eager to get started.

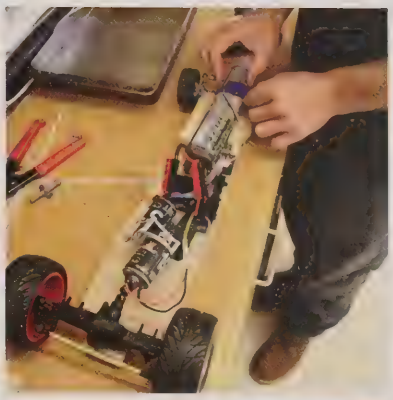

Tommy Cressey, largely responsible for the success of the wind turbine, is a four year engineering student who loves to work through projects. "My favorite part of the build was problem solving," says Cressey.

The success of the turbine was immense, and the batteries were successfully charged to power the RC cars. Although the turbine does not yet have a permanent home, the team plans to put it outside to gather power a few days before a big race. Though Cressey and Canzano will be graduating this year, they both hope to keep engineering a part of their life. As for Mr. Gallant's younger students, they plan to keep building in their years at IHS, and hope to continue the successes and innovations of mentors like Cressey and Canzano throughout high school.

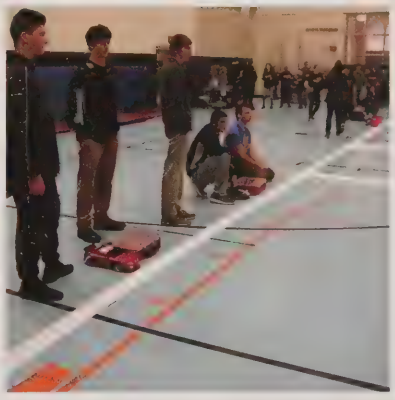

Innovation

Team Control

To an outside observer, Engineering Three seems like an easy class. wever, looks can be deceiving. In reality, the class is broken up into eight arate strands, each with its unique set of challenges and skills. Each skill area has a team, and each member of the team has their own . The jobs consist of Enterprise, Mods, Drags, or Robo, Creative ineering, Energy Challenge, Aerodynamic Design, and Chassis Set Up estment.

Over the past five years, each of these roles has played a critical part in uring a spot in national competitions. Teams from Ipswich have traveled over the country to places like Houston, Texas, and this year Troy, New rk. Duncan Tolstrup has been in the class for the past three years and has veled with the team to Houston, Miami, and this year, will join them in y.

Tolstrup is in charge of Mods and Drags, which means he is responsible collecting and recording data, backup driving, and building prototypes. "I e to adjust the car daily, and make sure I set the proper gear ratios so that road worthy," says Tolstrup.

Junior William Zambernardi decided to take a swing at Engineering Three year, and is excited to be a part of the team. "The class is kind of chaotic h constant building and designing, but in the end, it's nice to see the ult", he says. Zambernardi is in charge of public relations, and is ponsible for giving speeches and gathering the necessary funding for the m. He advertises the group to local businesses in hopes of gaining their pport, and constantly works to help his team succeed. With the knowledge nas gained this year, Zambernardi is confident that next year, he will come o his final year of engineering with full force.

What Would It Be Like If....

Our school colors weren't orange and black?
Mr. Ames wasn't at our school?
People didn't take walks?
Max Benford didn't play soccer?
The schedule stayed the same?
The junior prom page wasn't made in October?
Emmy Markos and Adam Fyrer didn't flirt?
Ethan Como didn't transform?
Jack and Miles weren't friends?
Reed Dolan was called Gerald?
Lexie Ferris didn't ride horses?
Dukey had a buzz cut?
Charlie Gillis wasn't an athlete?
Anthony Marini didn't have a farm?
Saba and Sara Whitmore got along?
Jack Gardner wasn't the president?
We all still had braces?
We didn't live near the ocean?
We weren't allowed to carry our backpacks?
Saba didn't have a loud sneeze?
Leah was an average student?
Moof never went missing?
We still had Mr. Dolan as a band teacher?
Sports teams didn't have dress up days?
People passed physics?
Andrew Monroe didn't do drama?
We didn't get a new turf field?
We didn't have any pods?
The school wasn't tapped by Stoneham?
There was no such thing as Kahoot?
There was no England trip?
Kia Castonguay didn't play hockey?
Emma Moulton wore sweatpants?
Nobody worked at Vinwood?
The crevice didn't exist?
Adam Barron didn't break curfew?
We all went to the same elementary school?

It is not the critic who counts;

*not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes up short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who, at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat.

Jesse Cullen-Popp

Dear Jesse, You have always been one to find your own path, to follow your heart. You have shown us that you are deeply thoughtful and responsible in the choices you make, that you are a loyal and compassionate friend, a fierce and fearless defender of what you know to be right, and a passionate seeker of truth, honesty, and justice. You have amazing gifts--your analytical mind that is as keenly attuned to literature and psychology and politics as it is to math and science and sports, your wit that leaves us shaking our heads in painful admiration, and your total dedication to soccer. We are so proud of you! We watch with joy and amazement at the accomplished young man you have become. And we look forward to watching the adventures you will embark on and the trails you will blaze as you make your own way in the world.
We love you so much, Mom & Dad
